

Employers through out the country are commenting on the pro active behaviour of HSE inspectors of recent weeks. In one report last week, while accident and emergency personnel were working hard to extract a worker from a piece of machinery, HSE inspectors where on premises investigating what had happened.

Another salutary comment is that our work rate accidents in hazardous sectors is five time higher than Great Britain where the regime is both more prescriptive and more punitive. Click here for a copy of the review document. Submissions were due by 18 October
