

Airways new General Manager Systems Operator, Pauline Lamb, starts work at Airways on Monday 4 March 2013.

Pauline is from NATS UK so has not worked in the New Zealand environment and has little knowledge of New Zealand aviation environment. Her bio as sent out to Airways staff reads as follows:

Pauline has been at NATS for 29 years, starting as a controller in 1983. She has been in management roles for 12 years including operational supervisor, running Glasgow Airport Air traffic operations and then was appointed as GM Prestwick Centre when it opened in Jan 2010. This role brought four Air Traffic operations into one operations room and had responsibility for bringing together teams covering Oceanic, Terminal, Enroute and off route airspace. As Operations Director in NATS Pauline holds responsibility for safety across the NATS operations and strategic planning to ensure the correct investments and relationships are made to meet the needs of future air traffic management in the UK and Over the North Atlantic.

Pauline's husband is a controller with NATS, and she has two boys 16 and 18 and a 21year old daughter. She enjoys sailing on the west coast of Scotland where she has a 43ft yacht (now up for sale!) enjoys running, hiking, skiing, scuba diving, and very occasionally sitting in the sun reading.

Pauline is very positive about her time at NATS, but feels it's time for a change. "Airways have offered me not only the chance to have a compelling job, but an opportunity for me and my family to explore a wonderful country, create new friendships, experience a different culture, and try new things. I thoroughly look forward to getting to know you all."
