WORKSHOP CONTENT

The Training Institute developed this workshop to equip people with a special combination of worldviews, preparation, support considerations & strategies needed to function with high moral ideals, with integrity intact, & even with effectiveness in the world generally & in human services that are full of imperfections & never-ending problems.

Some assumptions underlying the content of the workshop include:

- there are powerful dynamics of disfunctionality in the world
- these dynamics endlessly express themselves in derivative disfunctionalities in society, as well as in human service approaches, systems & structures
- it is imperative that people who want to function with greater moral coherency become aware of these dynamics
- once one is aware of these dynamics, one is in a position to respond & act much more adaptively in the world
- there exists an array of adaptive strategies for living with these realities

The workshop explains the great depth and universality of problems in the world, in society, & in human services. Many of these problems are intractable, & therefore need to be confronted in order to cope with them. The workshop orients participants to craft their moral identity, & offers strategies & encouragement to live adaptively & with coherency amidst the disfunctionality.

This workshop is not intended to provide participants with specific solutions to specific problems. Instead, participants will learn an array of universally applicable strategies that can be applied to whatever situations confront them & participants will be pointed toward further study & progress in these various strategies. Many resources will be distributed.

WORKSHOP FORMAT

The format of the workshop is physically & intellectually demanding. It is conducted in lecture-style, with a series of presentations given in a logical sequence of topics. Following each presentation there is opportunity for participant comment & general discussion. Some opportunities for private reflection on the material & for informal discussion are provided at the end of each of the first six days to assist participants to deal with the challenging nature of much of the material. Further information on the workshop format will be sent prior to the workshop.

What past workshop participants say

"Without a doubt the most thought provoking workshop I have attended"

"This is a brilliant workshop: suffused with deep insight and incisive analysis. It addresses many issues that confront us, in our professional as well as personal lives"

"A journey of self discovery that challenged the way I see the world. This workshop raised my consciousness to the underlying ideas that cause dysfunction in human services and how I can redirect my own interactions to forge a positive way forward"
